SERMON.

JOHN, XXI. 6.

HE SAID UNTO THEM, CAST THE NET ON THE RIGHT SIDE OF THE SHIP, AND YE SHALL FIND. THEY CAST, THEREFORE, AND NOW THEY WERE NOT ABLE TO DRAW IT FOR THE MULTITUDE OF FISHES.

ONE principal design of God in his dealings with his people, is to humble them, in order that they may be exalted by him in due time. They are to arrive at exaltation through, though not on account of, humiliation. That God may be glorified in them, they must be brought down to what is their right and proper position before Him. Man is a rebel and a sinner, and he must be brought before the throne of God to sue for mercy, and to receive pardon as an act of free and sovereign grace; and God is not glorified by him till this is effected. His will is the sanctification of his people, and this necessarily includes the casting out of every sin, the chiefest of which is pride, and the one that lies deepest in the heart of man; therefore, till this sin is cast out, or, in other words, till man is humbled, he is not sanctified, nor is God's will respecting him accomplished. Satan is to be confounded; but pride, by which he himself fell, and by which he wrought the fall of the human race, is still his principal stronghold in the heart, which, while he retains, so far from being confounded, he has still a cause of triumph, can appeal to that heart as a token of his success, and can say, there is my throne. Christ is to be exalted; but this is not done till the sinner is brought experimentally to know that Christ is all in all to him, without whom he can do nothing, and in whom alone he has wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption; till he is willing, in short, to be stripped of his self-glorying, self-opinion, and self-dependence, and to lie low at the feet of his Saviour.

In accordance with this purpose, that God may be glorified, the believer sanctified, Satan confounded, and the Saviour exalted, by the humiliation of his people, we find the history of the church of Christ to be a record of her humiliation, her Divine Head, from time to time, in infinite love and equal wisdom, trying, afflicting, and humbling her, to make and keep her dependent, and, through her sanctification, effect her meetness for glory. We shall also frequently find, in surveying that history, that seasons of remarkable prosperity were followed by depressing and humiliating events. The cause I conceive to have been, that, as prosperity fostered pride, which the ever-gracious and ever-watchful eye of her Lord perceiving, to prevent the consequence of a more dreadful fall, he taught her, by measured visitations, to walk humbly with her God. We shall find, also, that when the Church was brought to her greatest depression and humiliation, then was the time of her lifting up; for God's purpose in trying his people is to produce, not despondency, but deliverance; not to cast them down into despair, which will bring them into Satan's grasp, but to lead them, by humiliation, into exercises of faith, hope, and love.

We find, from the Revelations, that before the Church enters upon her final rest and triumph, she will experience a season of peculiar humiliation and trial. When the thousand years are expired (which, on any interpretation, will be years of signal felicity and peace) Satan shall be loosed out of his prison, and shall go out to deceive the nations which are in the four quarters of the earth, Gog and Magog, to gather them together to battle; and they went up on the breadth of the earth, and compassed the camp of the Saints about, and the beloved city; as though, just before the Lord will take his Church up to her ultimate glory, he would remind her once more of her weakness and dependence, that she might step up to it, as she had walked towards it, leaning on her beloved.

The Apostles of our blessed Lord, on the eve of becoming the most exalted and dignified men that ever trode this weary and sinful world, were unable to procure to themselves even a supply of poor and coarse fare. They who were soon to work such mighty miracles as to attract the attention of thousands to doctrines most offensive to their pride, prejudices, and passions, to give eyes to the blind, hearing to the deaf, feet to the lame, to restore the dead to life, and to be the honoured instruments of communicating spiritual life to souls dead in sin, were necessitated to receive a supply of food through a miracle wrought by their Master. They who were to be so soon endued with the discerning of Spirits, a gift approximating, in the exercise of it, to one of the perfections of Deity, to see into the hearts, and minds, and spirits of their fellow-men, were unable to tell on which side of their vessel successfully to cast the net, to acquire, through an accustomed trade, their daily bread. They who were about to become the pillars on which the Church of God was to be built, were thus reminded that in themselves they were as weak and feeble reeds. What a lesson of dependence upon God were these eminent men now taught! How were they reminded that they were to walk by faith, and not by sight! How much might this humbling circumstance, however trifling it may seem, have aided to prepare them for the reception of that astonishing gift which, on the day of Pentecost, was to qualify a few Jewish fishermen to become Apostles of the world ! It would assist to bring them into a humble, self-abased, dependent state of mind ; just that state of mind which it would please God to honour and approve by the communication of his Holy Spirit. It would remind them how alone they could successfully fulfil their high calling of "fishers of men." They had thrown the net in vain, and by no skill of their own, though brought up to that craft, could ensnare even a few of the finny inhabitants of the sea of Galilee, till their Divine Master accompanied his instruction with power, and, while they cast, brought the desired prey, in number even marvellous, within their reach. Would they not be admonished thus, that in the exercise of their sacred calling, as the world's Apostles, they must look to Christ alone for wisdom, power, and success ? They might learn also that the highest honour that cometh from God, does not exempt from temporal wants and trials : and that they who were to be kings and priests to God, nay, fathers of nations of kings and priests, were to be as dependent upon him for the relief of daily necessities, as the lowest of their fellow-creatures.

The same purpose of God, exhibited in the history of the Church, and exemplified in the case of the Apostles in the context, has been much manifested through the religious societies of our age and country. God has led most of them through many humbling trials into whatever degrees of success they have met with. He has thus taught them how little wisdom and strength they have in themselves, and how entirely they must look to Him, if they would see the work of the Lord prosper in their hands. Thus have they been kept from pride, and are from time to time struck down into that lowly dependence upon God, which is one of their best securities against the craft of Satan. Through afflictions and trials they have been led to success : the strength of God has been made perfect in weakness ; and they have experienced and illustrated that invariable rule in God's dealings, before honour is humility. In the history of the Societies of our age it has frequently occurred, that, when they least looked for success and have been most depressed by difficulties, disappointments, and losses, the greatest blessing has been just at hand ; and as God, while he strikes his children with one hand, holds them up with the other, and when he has brought them low with the arm of wise correction, then is wont to put beneath them that of love to keep them up, lest they should be tempted above measure ; so have the Religious Institutions of our Lord experienced alternations of prosperity and adversity, success and disappointment, and all in order that they might both labour diligently, rejoice with trembling, and walk humbly with their God.

When Jesus came to his Apostles, he saith unto them, Children, have ye any meat ? They an- swered him, No ! And he said unto them, Cast the net on the right side of the ship, and ye shall find. They cast, therefore, and now they were not able to draw it for the multitude of fishes. In reference to the observations previously made, these words may be applied to our religious Societies. "Children," (saith the Lord, for while humbling them, he addresses them by that term of near relationship, and reminds them that in correction he is still their gracious Father), "Children, have ye any success ? Have you much support at home, large incomes, great prosperity in your efforts, much good news to tell from distant lands ?" They answer, "No ! ah, no, Lord ! we have laboured some years, and little, very little, is the fruit produced ; or, We are almost ready to sink through difficulties and disappointments !" Then saith he to them (for man's necessity is His opportunity), "Be of good cheer ; try again—renew your endeavour—cast the net on the right side of the ship, and ye shall find ; ye needed humbling, but OBEY MY COMMAND IN FAITH, USE DILIGENTLY THE APPOINTED MEANS, AND THE EXPECTED SUCCESS SHALL NOT BE WANTING. They cast, therefore, and not now in vain. Their friends, at home or abroad, and the whole Church exclaim, as they see unlooked for effects produced, and success made more valuable by preceding disappointments, "What hath God wrought ! This is the Lord's doing, and it is marvellous in our eyes. The Lord maketh poor, and maketh rich—he bringeth low, and lifteth up.”

My subject in this discourse is now already divided, and, in dependence upon the Divine blessing, I shall draw your further attention to it under three heads :

I. OBEY MY COMMAND IN FAITH. We have here that great principle on which religious Societies, as well as individual Christians, are to act—the obedience of Faith. Faith is the great principle or spring of all true godly obedience; and for this reason: because the object it apprehends is Christ; it unites us to Him, and obtains Him for us, and without Christ we can do nothing. In the adorable Saviour is centered all that his Church collectively, and every member of that Church individually can want. In Him dwells all fulness of strength, wisdom, and grace. He is a full fountain, an exhaustless treasury, and the mean whereby we draw from that fountain, and receive out of that treasury, is, faith. The life that I now live in the flesh (says the Apostle), I live by the faith of the Son of God. Without me (says Christ), ye can do nothing. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine, so neither can ye, except ye abide in me. We are totally helpless, and altogether incapable of yielding acceptable obedience to the will and commandments of God; till we be ingrafted in Christ by the Holy Spirit, and by the arm of faith appropriate Him to ourselves in those offices which he sustains for his people. Faith, therefore, is the only principle of obedience, and the obedience of faith must be the influential spring of all the operations of Religious Societies.

Faith has respect both to the commands and the promises of God ; and there is no command without a correspondent and suitable promise. Faith recognizes the authority of God in the commands, and the love of God in the promises of Christ. The commands are acts of sovereign authority, and the promises are declarations of Divine love and mercy. The promises of the Saviour are drafts as it were drawn upon himself by himself, payable to faith the bearer, never dishonoured when so presented, and in the honouring or acknowledging of which, the infinitely true and gracious Saviour at once glorifies himself, and benefits us. Here is shewn the goodness of God. Faith laying hold of the promises of Christ, renders the obedience which springs from it, both a privilege and a duty. It might have been simply the latter. The Lord by his own infinite authority might have commanded ; do this or that ; and without attaching any promise, might have communicated internal strength for obeying the command, while the act of obedience had been a mere submission to sovereign power and will. It had been the constraint of duty : that duty which faith in its recognition of lawful authority, produces and sanctions. But by connecting cheering promises with the command, hope becomes united with her sister grace of faith in the production of obedience, and wherever there is hope there is pleasure, and duty becomes privilege as soon as ever pleasure is in the discharge of it. Thus, for instance, God forbids sin. Faith acknowledges the sovereign authority of the command, and dutifully obeys it. But God has attached the encouraging promise that sin shall not have dominion over us, and the prospect of his truth's fulfilment of this, cheers the Christian to that conflict with corruption which duty commands him to maintain. The promises let in a light on the path of duty which cheers us, as we walk along it, led forward by faith and hope. Thanks be to God for this manifestation of his love.

Faith is the eye of the soul, which, through the dim horizon of carnal reasoning, and doubts and fears, sees Jesus Christ. The bodily eye sees the command, and the bodily ear hears the promise; but then the bodily eye sees difficulties, and the bodily ear hears of what distresses and perplexes, and causes fear; but faith, the eye and ear of the soul, beholds and attends to, through all these, the Lord Jesus Christ, who is giving the command, and speaking the promise, and cheered and sustained by him, obeys. Therefore the Christian is said to endure, as seeing him who is invisible—therefore he runs with patience the race that is set before him, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of his faith—therefore he is made more than conqueror through him that hath loved him.

Faith is the application of great abstract truths respecting the Saviour to particular circumstances and cases. By abstract truths respecting the Saviour, I mean his infinite wisdom, love, power, and truth; none of which things do we doubt to constitute the character of our adorable Redeemer. And it is the Christian consolation in all his pilgrimage upon earth, to know that his Lord and Saviour, his counsellor and guide, his friend and advocate, is infinitely wise, gracious, powerful, and faithful. But faith is exercised in the application of these truths to particular cases and circumstances: and thus faith is not deterred by the difficulties of any particular trial, because it applies with respect to them the great abstract truth of Christ's omnipotence:—it is not affrighted by dangers, because it applies to meet them the truth of Christ's infinite, unchanging love:—it is not beaten by delays, because it applies to each particular delay the truth of Christ's infinite wisdom, who worketh all things after the counsel of his own will:—it is not cast down into despondency by defeat, because faith applies, as consolation under it, the great truth of Christ's immutable faithfulness. And as faith thus applies the great truths of the Saviour to particular cases, the obedience of faith walks on still, as such cases and circumstances arise, cheered and supported by that application of the Saviour ; drawing out of that treasury, as she needs, supply ; receiving of his fulness according to her wants, and resting on his everlasting arm.

Faith is of heavenly origin : it is the gift of God. Religious Societies, which are formed on a principle of obedience to some known duty, ought to bear this in mind. They are apt to rest on their own force and wisdom : their supporters are wont to rest too much on human means : if successful, are consequently apt to be elated ; if otherwise, to despond. They are apt to attach too much weight to money, to popularity, to means of excitement, and not to depend sufficiently and simply upon God. But though they should not neglect those means, they should look more above them ; they should rest more on God : there should be more of prayer among them ; for then faith, which alone can elevate them above too great a dependence on secondary causes of success, and maintain them in a steady pursuit of their object, would be given to them more largely. Lord, increase our faith, should be their constant, urged application to the throne of grace. The obedience of faith would be the effect of the answer.

Faith as a principle is extremely simple ; so much so, that its very simplicity is an obstacle to the reception and exercise of it with many. Observe the illustration of it presented in the text: "Cast the net on the right side of the ship, and ye shall find." It was Christ that spoke. Faith realized the authority which commanded, and the promise which encouraged; and from this simple principle flowed the obedience of the Apostles. "They cast therefore, and now they were not able to draw it for the multitude of fishes." Take another passage; and referring to that object for which I address you—the education of the young—Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it. Here is a command and a promise. Reason would object the difficulties in the way of obedience to the command, or the many apparent failures as to the fulfilment of the promise. Reason would calculate what she will call the probabilities of fulfilment: she will balance the cases where success is known, and where there has been apparent failure; and she will draw the conclusion so against either the command or the promise, as to neglect obedience. But faith will say, "It is God's command: train up a child in the way he should go; and faith will add, "It is God's promise, when he is old he shall not depart from it. Enough for me. I obey the command, and I doubt not but that God will fulfil his promise." And so faith, instead of calculating, questioning, reasoning, and doubting, sets about obedience: a duty because of the command, but a privilege also, on account of the encouragement of the promise. Faith, though she is confident, let me add, is also humble, especially humble, before God. This grace holds up the Christian in the world, and leads him gallantly forth as the bravest soldier in the field of battle, putting on his head the helmet of salvation, so that he goes in the strength of his Lord, conquering and to conquer. Faith enables him to face the world, subdue the flesh, and resist the Devil, and he stands, a spectacle of hatred to devils, of ridicule to the unbelieving world, of astonishment to the Church, but unto angels and to God himself, an object of joy, in the discharge of the various duties to which he is called. But before the throne of grace faith presents him lowly, on his knees; importunate, yet deeply abased; that will take no denial, yet owns he merits no answer; confesses he deserves the repulse, which yet he will not bear with. He that is a bold avower of God's truths before men, becomes a most lowly petitioner for grace before God. Faith supposes prayer, lives by prayer, acts in prayer, and is, herself, the life of prayer. The prayer of faith is essential to carry into effect those objects which the obedience of faith seeks after. Oh! if there was more of the prayer of faith—if faith was brought more constantly into the humble posture of supplication before God, religious institutions would have more to speak of before men, and would be able, with more confidence, to ask for human aid.

But faith is earnest, and diligent also in the use of means.

In the case of the Disciples, the means to be employed were pointed out in the command :—cast the net on the right side of the ship. Their belief of the accompanying promise did not produce any neglect of, or variation from those means. They cast, therefore, with all readiness, industry, skill, and obedience to the direction they had received.

This leads to the consideration of the second point comprehended in the text.

II. Use diligently the appointed means.—It would be useless to take up time in proving that means are to be used for the accomplishment of God's purposes; or, that there is to be a choice or selection of means where many present themselves; or that reason and good sense are not to be thrown into disuse by the exercise of faith. The object for which I plead to-night, is the education of the young in the Colony of Newfoundland. I shall not stop to prove the education of youth, generally, to be a duty. The commands of God are too plain for any who believe the Bible, to doubt it; and these commands are sanctioned by gracious encouragements. I wish, however, on this occasion, to make some remarks on the subject of education, or on the means which should be used in training up children in the way they should go, and, in communicating religious instruction beneficially to the young; more particularly in that class who demand charitable aid. They cast the net on the right side of the ship. I do not mean to spiritualize the passage too much, or to wrest it to any forced meaning, but it is plain there was a prescribed form to be observed by them: i. e. it was not a matter of indifference how they cast: there was, so to speak, a right and a wrong side. In this case, it was simply the command of Christ which fixed the means; in the education of children, reason, observation, experience, confirmed generally by the word of God, will find the same distinction, and will, amidst many means proposed and used, select the right, reject the objectionable, and make proof of the questionable.

It is of infinite importance that the great and principal object in the education of the young should never be lost sight of. There are many minor objects, such as to civilize them, to make them good members of society, to lift them out of that gross ignorance in which they would otherwise remain, to enable them to read and write, but the main object is, that their souls may be saved. When this is lost sight of, and the minor objects are kept too much in view, and from being so, often become the sole objects; then, this which is unquestionably of main importance, being lost sight of, fatal errors, as to the method of education, will be the consequence. It is of infinite moment then, that every institution and individual engaged in the education of the young should keep in view the primary object, and this great leading principle, here are immortal souls to be plucked from Satan, delivered from sin, gathered out of the world, rescued from eternal misery, and made everlastingly happy. This should be at once the motive to and guide of our exertions.

This leads to another observation :—

Holy Scripture points out one way of obtaining eternal salvation—the knowledge of Jesus Christ.—He is the way, the truth, and the life, and no man cometh unto the Father but by him. He is the only Saviour, and other foundation can no man lay, than that is laid, which is Christ Jesus. Therefore, in the education of the young, this should be one of the objects most carefully kept in view, or, in other words, one of the means most diligently used; to teach them Christ, to lead them to the Saviour, to make them acquainted with him, to accept his invitation, suffer the little children to come unto me. The instruction of the young should be conducted on this settled principle :—not only here are souls to be saved, but which can obtain salvation only through the knowledge of Jesus Christ ; and, therefore, our main object in instructing these children must be, to bring them to that knowledge. These two points being admitted, there are some further remarks in connexion with them, which I wish to draw your attention to.

Respecting the use of the Scriptures.—It is in one sense a very scriptural age in which we live. The Scriptures are, compared with former years, largely distributed. They are introduced very freely into schools, with but few exceptions.

But there is a danger, and not a slight one, attending this state of things : that of the Holy Scriptures being regarded with irreverence. We should remember how natural it is to man to dislike God's word as such : that we are by no means to expect a relish for Scripture in the mind of youth : that the seriousness of the subjects it treats of will not recommend it to them : that it will be Satan's object to create in them a dislike or disregard of it ; therefore great care should be maintained, that if the Scriptures are the school book, they should be opened by the young with a full impression, if possible, THIS IS THE WORD OF GOD, it is THE BOOK given to make me wise unto Salvation : it is a message sent from God to me. It should be ever looked into with seriousness. Whether the use made of the Bible in schools is not calculated to prevent this, is a point of serious consideration.

2. There is a danger of learning scripture truths in what may be called a flippant manner. They are weighty truths : that man is a fallen sinner ; that the Son of God hath tasted death upon the cross for us men, and for our salvation ; that there are heaven and hell before us, the value of the soul, the gift of the Holy Spirit : these and very many others are solemn truths, not to be learnt irreverently, nor repeated carelessly. It is true children cannot be made serious and in earnest about religion by education only : it is the work of the Spirit of God to do this. But great care is to be taken lest a spirit is induced, the very opposite to seriousness in religion. Children, when questioned on Scriptural subjects, may reply with perfect correctness as to the matter of their answers, but with a levity as to their spirit, and indifference of manner, which show that they hold the subject of religion, and of the salvation of the soul, in no more serious estimation, than they do grammar or arithmetic. And the commendation they receive strengthens the evil. Rather let them be checked, however correct their answers, when the spirit in which they are given is light, or the manner irreverent or tending to profaneness, lest this levity and irreverence should become the habits of maturer life, and the solemn topics of the preacher shall be considered as of no more importance than any common place information.

There is great danger of the opinion being entertained that the mere acquisition of knowledge is all that is to be sought, to be effected by education. It is easy to store the memories of children with Scripture, and to bring them to repeat large portions of it, and to give them an extensive head-knowledge of its language, phrases, doctrines, and facts; but how little is all this without the application of these Scriptures to their hearts and consciences. It may be that the Spirit of God will hereafter impress the heart through that scriptural store which the memory contains; but no one will say that this is a necessary result. Is it not fact that a child who shall know the whole of the New Testament, as we say, by heart, may die in his sins, and go to hell, and a deeper hell too, from the superior light and knowledge he possessed; and this perhaps because his teacher forgot that the design of education was not to make wise unto head-knowledge, but wise unto Salvation.

There is always great danger of religious duties becoming mere formality. There is a constant danger of this being the case with the real Christian: and there is a constant danger of it with those of mature years and understanding. How much more so with children, whose natural ardour and flow of spirits will make religious duties rather a task than a pleasure ; and who, but in few cases, probably will be under the influence of real piety ? It appears to be a manifest defect in the present general system of education, which commits the religious instruction of the young to their fellow scholars. Children may be very well able to question and examine other children in grammar, spelling, or arithmetic ; or they may discharge the duties of teachers and monitors with the superintendence of a master or mistress ; but it cannot be allowed that they are able to undertake that part of the work of instruction which comprises the communication of religious knowledge. The exceptions to the contrary are too rare to be taken into consideration.

Being without a feeling of religion themselves, or if not altogether so, yet without that experience which is necessary to qualify one Christian to instruct another, though they may aid in communicating head-knowledge to those under their care, yet they cannot be fitted to make that application of divine truth to the heart and conscience which is necessary in order to the effectual benefit of those who are taught. There is, therefore, a danger lest this country should rest satisfied with the supposition that a great and effectual system of religious education is going on, while and because there is a vast amount of scriptural knowledge diffusing among the rising generations of this country. And there is very much danger lest they should suppose that the storing the head and memory with Scripture, may supersede close application of its truths to the conscience and heart. In this case education would prove a curse to this land instead of a blessing.

From these observations, it will appear of how much importance it is that those who are at the head of schools should be persons of sound piety and discretion. And it is with more confidence that I can commend the institution for which I plead to your support, because I am informed that the schoolmasters and mistresses are persons of real piety, so far as man can judge of man ; and when they feel the influence of religion, and the value of souls themselves, they will be able as well as desirous to communicate religious knowledge to the children.

There is also another danger, lest education should be put in any degree in the place of the holy ordinance of preaching the word by which the Spirit of God has chiefly wrought in every age ; lest the school should supersede the pulpit, as is the case in some countries of Europe. It is a great object of the infidels and Neologians in Germany to degrade the pulpit, and to substitute for preaching, education ; and to produce an opinion that the instructions given in the schools, academies, and universities, render ministerial teaching of the divine word superfluous. The blow is aimed, in fact, at the influence of the Holy Spirit, and at the truth of his personality, agency, and being : ostensibly, at that ordinance by which his power has always been most manifested in the Christian church.

The discipline of schools also requires much more care than is generally paid to it. Pride in the human heart is an universal and deep-rooted evil. There is an evident liability of its being fostered and excited in those whose circumstances in life gave them little reason to expect the advantages of superior knowledge. They are very liable to be lifted up by education ; and there is some truth in the observation which persons not friendly to general education are apt to make, that the lower ranks of society in this country are lifted out of their proper stations by the present system of national education. Sufficient care is not taken to prevent this, and to restrain the pride of the human heart. The principle of emulation (one which requires a masterly hand to regulate it aright), it may be feared, is carried too far. There is also in the conducting of that system, so widely established at present, a sort of lordly rule, a kind of commandership of youth over their fellow youth, which, unless great care is taken, may much injure the mind, and produce, among the female children especially, a boldness which is subversive of modesty, and leads to many very serious evils.

In the conduct of education in the present day are three evils to be peculiarly guarded against : an infidel spirit, which is not seldom a consequence of studying scripture, as we should another book, merely for amusement or information, or of a mere head-knowledge of scriptural facts, without any impression being produced on the heart ; formality, into which persons easily fall who have been familiar with the forms of devotion from their youth, but on whom it has never been sufficiently impressed that the form of godliness without the power is of little avail ; profligate living, into which many turn aside, on whom a knowledge of the solemn truths of God have had only a hardening effect, never having been brought home to the conscience and affections, but becoming a savour of death unto death.

Let me now draw your attention to the third subject of consideration.

III. The expected success shall not be wanting. In faith obey the command, use diligently the appointed means, and the desired blessing shall not be withheld. Cast the net on the right side of the ship, and ye shall find. They cast, therefore, and now they were not able to draw it for the multitude of fishes.

Our blessed Lord, when calling Peter and Andrew to the apostleship, used the remarkable words, I will make you fishers of men. What was meant by the expression, fishers of men? It implied that they should be instrumental in bringing souls out of the world to God. I will make you fishers of men: I will successfully employ you as my agents in gathering my elect from the dominion of Satan, and from the ways and spirit of a world that lieth in the wicked one. And such shall be the result of the institutions formed for the education of the young, when the net is cast on the right side of the ship, i. e. when proper means are used in faith to train up children in the way they should go. The world is figuratively termed the sea in Scripture. Tempestuous and stormy, a mass of beings agitated and impelled by the great master-spirit of evil, this unsettled world, driving on its waves of successive generations towards the shores of eternity—dashed together as they go in fearful conflict of interests, or hurried on by the currents of passion, this fatal world, most fatal when most calm, how aptly is it represented by the ocean of mighty waters! It is an immense tide by which hundreds and thousands of souls are drawn on, and hurried onward to Satan and to hell. O what a scene does it exhibit to the mind's eye of the Christian, calmly contemplating it from the rock of his own immoveable foundation of faith and hope in Jesus! The wrath of God resting upon it, like a gloomy cloud; innumerable souls moving in it, unconscious of the storm about to burst upon them, and of that mighty destruction in which both they and the element they inhabit are doomed to be involved. But by the blessing of God on the preaching of the word, on the means of grace generally, and on the scriptural and Christian instruction of youth, many souls, yea, a number that no man can number, shall be delivered from that destruction, by being delivered from that world, its spirit, its fashions, its sins, its vortex of iniquity, into which they will otherwise be drawn as they come up into life, and may perish everlastingly.

The term, fishers of men, implied, secondly, that they should be the instruments of bringing many souls into another element : into the enjoyment of real religion, and under the influence of the powers of the world to come ! How unsatisfactory are the world's joys ! How poor the pleasure which its votaries find in one and another of its gratifications ! But it is not so with the servant of God. There is a solid peace enjoyed by him ; there is a real satisfaction in religion. Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace. The pleasures of the world debase the soul ; they draw down from God ; they draw down and bind to earth ; whereas religion elevates the soul, draws it up to God, and makes man walk as it were in an atmosphere above the earth he dwells upon. How elevated, how peaceful, how sanctifying, the pleasures enjoyed by those who are brought into union with God through his indwelling and witnessing spirit! Education, like the preaching of the word, though not in the same degree, but rather as subordinate to it, is a means of bringing youth to God. How blessed is he that knows God! that seeks to walk with him through the day. He rises in the morning, not as once he did to go without prayer or supplication into the trials and temptations of life; but he first has communion with his Almighty Father, and then goes forth, not to live for himself but for his Saviour. There is a peaceful calm over his soul. Is he tempted? he knows where his strength is—is he tried? he has proved where he may find consolation—has he to perform duties? he knows where to go for support: the throne of grace is familiar to him; his closet sends him to his duties, and his duties send him back to his closet. He has alternate cloud and sunshine, sorrow and joy, rest and trouble; but still he is more and more drawing out of this world, aspiring towards Heaven, and journeying to it! When day closes, he alone may say, I will lay me down in peace and take my rest, for it is Thou only that makest me to dwell in safety. Blessed is the individual that has true religion, and who, having it himself, will desire that others may possess it likewise. He will become, in some way or other, a fisher of men.

That term implies the bringing souls to Christ, to that Saviour who centers in himself all present and future good. They shall be made his property, his portion, his people; so that each of them shall say: I am my beloved's, and my beloved is mine. In the Lord they shall have wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption.

Cast the net, and ye shall find. This is a promise which shall not be withheld. The fisherman goes forth to his annual labour on the shores of that Island for the Schools of which I plead. He exposes his life to innumerable perils; he casts his net, but often in vain; returns without his food and the support of his family, his hopes disappointed, his prospects blasted, and despair ready to possess him; but not so we who go forth at the command of our Lord, and are seeking to gather the souls of children to him, by casting the net of a judicious, careful, scriptural education. Our hope is not a speculation, our expectations shall not be disappointed; He who gave the command has also given the promise: cast the net, and ye shall find.

The Institution whose interests we meet to promote, is formed to instruct the children of, I believe, the oldest colony of this country. It appears highly inconsistent that we should send instruction to Africa, to India, to the East and the West, to New Zealand, to almost every part of the earth, while our oldest colony is neglected. Our colonies should afford a specimen of that religion which we have at home. It is culpable, indeed, in us to allow those slips of the parent tree, which we have planted in a distant land like this colony, to remain without cultivation or improvement, and bringing forth no fruit to God. Our colonies should exhibit the adaptation of the religion of our Lord Jesus Christ to man under every clime and in every part of the world, that it can flourish alike in the cultivated fields of Europe, in the torrid plains of Africa, in the ice-bound coasts of Labrador, and on the shores of Newfoundland.

It becomes us to prove that Christianity is able to civilize, to moralize, and to save man wherever God has fixed the bounds of his habitation. If a proper feeling of the value of souls influences us, we shall not be remiss in our endeavours to be instrumental to their salvation. We shall try all scriptural means "if by any means we may save some." And while faith influences our obedience to the commands of Christ, and hope concurs to animate our endeavour, and Scripture directs and aids reason in the selection and use of suitable means, we may assure ourselves that the promised blessing will not be withheld, but that in due time we shall reap, if we faint not. The friends of the instruction of the rising generation in the island of Newfoundland may look to behold the reward of their exertions, their contributions, and their prayers in the diffusion of genuine religion throughout its coasts, and in the preparation of a people, (the great body of whom are by their calling, peculiarly exposed to the hazard of life,) for death, for judgment, and for an eternity of bliss in the kingdom of the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

OF THE NEWFOUNDLAND SCHOOL SOCIETY.

BEFORE your Committee detail their proceedings during the past year, they would avail themselves of this interesting opportunity publicly to express their humble and devout acknowledgments to the Father of Mercies and God of all Grace, by whom the Society (now in the fifth year of its existence) "has obtained help, and continues unto this day."

For the convenience of future Committees, the sanction of the Subscribers is now requested to an alteration in the day of their monthly meetings, which it is proposed shall be held, in future, on the second Monday instead of the first Tuesday in the month.

Pursuing the order adopted in former Reports, your Committee begin the history of their proceedings at St. John's.

ST. JOHN'S.

Several circumstances have combined to lessen the attendance of the Children at the Central School during the last year.

This reduction has been caused chiefly by the revival of an old School in St. John's, established originally by Admiral Lord Gambier, when Governor of the Island, now called "The St. John's Charity School," and which has been much enlarged of late; and also by the opening of a new School, called "The Orphan Asylum," which is numerously attended.

Although for the present, therefore, these Institutions have certainly lessened very considerably the number of scholars in the Central School, yet, looking to the large and increasing population of St. John's, and the growing demand for education, your Committee see no reason to view the diminution which has taken place in Mr. and Mrs. Jeynes' Schools with any feeling of discouragement.

It is the sincere desire of the Committee to "follow peace with all men," to avoid every thing in the shape of collision or opposition, and to aim, by kindness and liberality, to unite all denominations in one bond of union. They are prepared to sacrifice every thing but principle for peace; and they will unfeignedly rejoice in the prosperity of every other Institution in Newfoundland which shall co-operate with them in the great work of Scriptural education.

To the before-mentioned causes is to be added one, which, although it now happily exists no more, has powerfully operated, during the last summer, to lessen the attendance of the Children, not only at the Central School, but likewise at all the other stations in the occupation of this Society. The measles broke out in the Colony with great violence last July, and at the same time a contagious fever spread so rapidly, that at St. John's, it was thought necessary to convene a public meeting, and through the liberality and benevolence of the inhabitants a considerable sum was raised to provide accommodation for the sick and dying. Under these new and anxious circumstances, Mr. and Mrs. Jeynes have conducted themselves with much propriety; their letters breathe a spirit which all the friends of unanimity and religion must approve.

Nor have they been left without encouragement. Mr. J. represents his Schools as, on the whole, improving, and his Adult scholars as being much more regular in their attendance than through any previous winter; and he acknowledges with gratitude the continued liberality of the Annual Subscribers in St. John's, and the kindness of many friends to the Schools.

QUIDI VIDI.

"My School," Mr. Jeynes says, "at this place, under George Browning's care, I have attended on Sundays, and twice in the week, and have admitted about the usual number, and their attendance, which has lately increased, has been better than I expected."

TRINITY.

Mr. Fleet continues to labour in this place with the same zeal and good success as formerly. The following are extracts from his Journal and Letters during the last year :—

“ May 5th, 1827.—A gentleman came to examine one of my senior boys, whose education he thought was sufficient to place him in his service. After looking at his books, and asking him a few suitable questions, he resolved upon trying him. I felt greatly encouraged at the circumstance, and trusted many more would leave our Institution in the like respectable manner.”

“ August 6th.—All my little flock ill with the measles; finding it therefore useless to open School, I determined upon visiting each family. I found 68 Children unable to rise from their beds, each of whom I saw. Resumed my visits daily.”

“ September 5th.—Visited the northward shore of this Harbour; distributed some tracts and religious books, which were thankfully received; from thence I proceeded to Ship Cove and distributed some more tracts, and received a cordial welcome.”

“ September 26th.—Flag half-mast for the death of one of my scholars, a little boy: at half-past 2 p. m. went to his house, accompanied by the whole of the Children, who followed the corpse, two and two, to the grave. The season was solemn, and many of the Children were in tears. He was about 10 years of age, and, though of a weakly constitution, was distinguished at School for his constant attention and good conduct, and I considered him my best boy."

Mr. Fleet also relates the death of a little girl, of an equally pleasing character.

The average number of Mr. Fleet's daily School is from 70 to 80, and his winter Adult School 21.

HARBOUR GRACE.

The School-room and Dwelling-house for the Master are completed, and Mr. and Mrs. Kingwell have now nearly 100 Children under their care daily, besides an Adult Evening School for Men, which has been well attended during the winter months, and the progress of the scholars is encouraging. Mr. and Mrs. Kingwell have also a good Sunday School, consisting of more than 100 Children of both sexes.

Mr. Kingwell's Journal contains the following interesting particulars of the happy death of one of Mrs. Kingwell's scholars, a little girl of 11 years of age:—"In the former part of her illness she felt much sorrow for her sinful state, and frequently expressed her feelings in the language of one of the hymns she had learned at School; but before her removal hence she was enabled to look to Jesus as her Saviour, and talked of the event of her death with pleasure. The peace of mind she enjoyed, the affectionate though pointed admonitions she gave to each of a large family, her resignation under acute suffering, and her firm faith in the sufficiency of her Redeemer fully evidenced her change of heart. She was one of our first scholars in this place, and, previous to her indisposition, regular in her attendance at School. She appeared at times to be much pleased with the Catechetical Examinations, and when we were reading the Scriptural stories on a Sunday evening, seemed to feel much interested; but I had no reason to believe that any decided spiritual improvement had taken place until her illness."

"May 25th.—The Hon. Chief Justice Tucker came to examine the School: we had above 90 present. After making many inquiries respecting the number on the books in attendance generally, and of the Adults, &c., he proceeded to examine the three first classes of the boys and girls; was apparently much pleased, and rewarded one with a Bible, five with Testaments, three with Prayer Books, and three with a dollar each."

"A conviction that the Society has the interest of Newfoundland at heart has been very pleasingly evinced by a voluntary subscription raised here for purchasing a bell for the School-House of 40 pounds weight, of the value of 5*l.*, and 3*l.* to defray the expense of hanging it. We have fixed it on the centre of the roof, which adds considerably to the appearance of the building; but the greatest benefit is, that it ensures a prompt attendance, which enables us to commence School at the appointed time with more regularity."

"September 20th.—The measles are spreading very generally: 45 of our scholars are this week sick, and many others are stopping at home in the vain hope of avoiding them, which obliges us to shut our Schools and employ the time in visiting our Children, and administering to their wants. It was gratifying to visit those in their affliction on whom the truth had any influence. May it encourage us to labour with more faithfulness and zeal!"

CARBONNIERRE.

Mr. and Mrs. Teulon have about 60 Children under their care, 35 of whom are girls, besides an encouraging Sunday School. The numbers in their daily Schools have not much increased during the last year, owing to the smallness of the School-rooms and the prevalence of sickness at the Station throughout the summer.

"In July (Mr. Teulon observes) the measles made their appearance, and in the ensuing month they spread rapidly among the Children: from that period we were but of little use as Teachers, and our office was changed to that of doctor and nurse. We were constantly employed between School-hours, and often all day long: this, though painful, was yet the most interesting period of our residence here, for we became better acquainted with both Children and Parents than we should probably otherwise ever have been. We were instrumental to the comfort of many, as is generally acknowledged, and to the saving of the lives of some. We had also opportunities of speaking to several of the Children concerning their hope of salvation; their replies in general to my questions were proper, and evinced, at least, a considerable advance in knowledge."

Among Mr. and Mrs. Teulon's Scholars, however, one little girl, who died of cold caught after the measles, gave satisfactory evidence of decided piety. She had been nearly two years in the School, and had endeared herself to her Teachers by her uniform good conduct and affectionate manner. Her habits were unusually studious and thoughtful, and her chief delight was in reading her Bible and committing Dr. Watts's Hymns to memory: by these means, with the instruction she received at School, her mind became silently and deeply imbued with Divine truth; so that her sickness and death supply us with another illustration of that Scripture, "Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise."

She expressed great affection for her Teachers, and requested that they might be sent for, to read and pray with her. Mr. and Mrs. Teulon were with her when she died, and they bear ample testimony to the assurance of happiness with which she was animated and supported to the last. Your Committee cannot conceive that a stronger appeal or a higher encouragement can be offered to the Christian philanthropist than such facts as this: they surely afford the most affecting and unequivocal proof to our friends in general, and to the Inhabitants of Newfoundland in particular, that God is blessing our labours, and that so long as we aim simply at his glory, he will make this Society the honoured instrument (among others) of accomplishing his purposes of love and mercy to Newfoundland.

PETTY HARBOUR.

The School-House at Petty Harbour is completed, and your Committee have great satisfaction in acknowledging the zeal, good-will, and liberality of the Inhabitants in contributing their aid towards the accomplishment of this important work. Mr. and Mrs. Martin have each a daily School of about 30, and a Sunday School, which is attended by at least 70 Children, and is very encouraging. Their Adult School consists of 18 males and 7 females.

The following are extracts from Mr. Martin's Journal :—

“ May 20th.---Broke up School; the Children assembled about 10 o'clock, and laid out their reward-tickets in purchasing books; some bought the Word of Truth. When I told them we were going to leave for a fortnight, there appeared a general regret among them, and on taking leave many shed tears. Happy am I to think we have so far gained the affection of our Children: they love us, and we indeed love them; and believing it to be a true maxim, that ‘love is better than constraint,’ we have made it the principle of action in our Schools.”

“ September 20th.—The Children came in the evening to change their library books; one of the Adult Scholars, a girl of 18, said, ‘ Would you sell me this book, Sir?’ Let me see it, I said, and looking at it I found it was a book of Hymns and Prayers. I said, why do you want it; is it because you like the hymns that are in it? She answered, ‘ No, Sir, the prayers.’ Do you love to pray? ‘ Yes, Sir,’ she modestly replied. I let her have the book. She has been in our School about 15 months, during which time she has learned to read the Bible. She usually brings the greatest number of answers to the weekly question, and her general conduct affords us great encouragement.”

Mr. Martin gives a brief but very interesting account of a journey to some adjacent places. In one he found 75 houses, with 360 Inhabitants, and more than 100 Children, with no means of instruction, excepting during four of the winter months, when two persons teach about 30 Children, and their pay is a week’s diet with each parent in rotation. An old man observed, “ It would be a good thing for this place if we had some of the privileges Petty Harbour has got.”

In another Bay, containing 80 Inhabitants, 30 of whom were Children, there had never been a School. He entered one house, and was surrounded by a group of 12 or 14 Children, anxious to see the stranger; not one of them knew a letter. Three miles further south he came to a Cove, with a population of more than 400, including about 90 Children, and no School; but in the winter a person taught a few for his diet. He learned, also, that a neighbouring Island, containing 8 families, and three other inhabited Coves, were without any means of Education; and that, in another Bay, there was but one small School, affording instruction to about 20 Children, in a population of 450 souls.

BONAVISTA.

This Station is the last which the Society at present occupies, and is the farthest removed from the Capital, being about 100 miles north of St. John's. Mr. and Mrs. Hopper speak of their prospects, on the whole, as encouraging. They have more than 100 daily scholars, which are as many as can be accommodated at present; but, as the population of Bonavista is between 2 and 3000, there is no doubt that many more Children will be gathered under their care when the new rooms are built. At a public meeting of the Inhabitants, Subscriptions were entered into, and a Committee was appointed to superintend the building of a School-House. The sum of 60*l.* was subscribed, and a large haul of timber having been made, the work was begun, and on Saturday, the 15th of December, Mr. Hopper had the gratification of seeing the frame put down. Your Committee have voted 50*l.* toward the building, and they hope that the friends of education in Bonavista, being thus encouraged, will be induced to complete the work before the winter commences.

Before your Committee dismiss this part of their Report, they would refer to the intention announced at the last Annual Meeting of establishing a School at Green's Pond, which is situate about 40 or 50 miles north of Bonavista, and contains a population of more than 1100. The Inhabitants of Green's Pond have set an example of zeal and liberality in the cause of education which your Committee hope will be universally followed in the Island. They subscribed, two years ago, 86*l.* towards the expence of building, and have since not only provided sufficient timber, but commenced the building of a School-House, which they have been exerting themselves to finish in time to receive a Master this season.

Your Committee have much pleasure in stating that they have engaged a competent Master for this Station. Mr. King, has passed through the National School in Baldwin's Gardens with great credit, and will sail immediately for Newfoundland. Your Committee entreat the prayers of the Meeting on his behalf, that it may please God to make him a holy, diligent, and successful labourer.

HOME.

Your Committee now proceed to give a brief account of their operations at home.

The City of London Ladies Association has been encouraged by the support of her Grace the Duchess of Beaufort, who has kindly accepted the office of Patroness to the Association. Your Committee are greatly indebted to the Ladies who have so effectively managed its affairs, and fully justified the pleasing anticipations which were indulged at its formation. It has raised the sum of 146*l.* during the short time it has been established.

The finances of the Society have also been liberally assisted by contributions of Work from the Ladies of the Metropolis, Clapham, Camberwell, Blackheath, Brighton, Gloucester, Hereford, Teignmouth, &c. The produce of such Sales, during the last year, amounts to the sum of 270*l.* 12*s.* 8*d.*

Your Committee have the pleasure to announce the formation of three new Auxiliaries, viz., at Norwich, Leeds, and Nottingham; and two Associations, viz., at Camberwell and Bradford, the former of which is likely to prove a most effective support to the Society; making in all 25 Auxiliaries and Associations in different Counties, whose united contributions during the past year amount to 1045*l.* 5*s.* 4*d.*

Mr. Codner visited, in the course of the autumn, Harwich, Colchester, Ipswich, Norwich, Hull, Harrogate, Leeds, Bradford, Nottingham, Birmingham, Gloucester, Bath, and Bristol. At all these places he met with the same Christian kindness, liberality, and hospitable entertainment which he has always experienced when advocating the cause of the Newfoundland School Society.

At Norwich an Auxiliary Society was formed on the 10th of September, under the patronage of the Lord Bishop of Norwich. Two Sermons also, were preached in behalf of the Society in the same city. A Meeting was also held at Harrowgate, and an Auxiliary formed at Leeds, to which the Earl of Harewood presented 20*l*.

At Nottingham also, an Auxiliary Society for the city and county was established.

Mr. Codner, in his letters, mentions with gratitude and devout acknowledgment, the many encouragements he met with in his journey; but your Committee feel more and more the importance of obtaining the services of a Clerical Secretary, in order that the different Associations may be visited in that stated order so necessary for maintaining and increasing a lively interest among their numerous friends; and it is their earnest prayer that He who has the hearts of all men in his hand, may raise up for the Society a suitable agent for this necessary and important work.

The Society is under many and great obligations to the following Clergymen, who have preached in its behalf more than once during the last twelve months: The Rev. Henry Budd, M.A., the Rev. A. Brandram, M.A., the Rev. R. W. Sibthorp, B.D., the Rev. F. Faithfull, B.A. Rev. John Wilcox, M.A., Rev. C. S. Hawtrey, M.A., Rev. W. H. Springett, M.A., and Rev. James Harris, M.A. Your Committee desire also gratefully to acknowledge the prompt attention which their appeal has received from those Clerical friends who have afforded their brethren an opportunity of advocating the claims of the Society from their pulpits. The congregational collections throughout the past year amount to £249. 4s. 6d.

From the British and Foreign Bible Society the Society has received a liberal grant of 250 Bibles and 500 Testaments; besides which, the Society is indebted to several pious and benevolent friends who have manifested their affection to the cause by various presents of Books, Music, &c.

Your Committee feel that their acknowledgments are currently due to His Excellency the Governor, the various Members of the Government, to the Clergy and Ministers of all denominations, to the Officers of His Majesty's Navy and Army, and to the Merchants and Inhabitants in general of Newfoundland, for the support they have on all occasions afforded to this Society. To Mr. Cock, of St. John's, your Committee also would tender the expression of their cordial thanks for the important and disinterested aid which that gentleman has so long rendered, and continues to afford to the Society, notwithstanding its accumulating business, and his own mercantile concerns.

Your Committee have much pleasure in stating that His Excellency Sir Thomas Cochrane, the Governor of Newfoundland, has accepted the office of Vice Patron, and Viscount Mandeville that of Vice-President of this Society.

Your Committee continue to receive from their Masters encouraging communications of the good will of the Inhabitants in general at their respective stations towards this Institution; and the list of contributions in the Appendix is a proof of the kind feeling and enlightened views which animate not a few among the Merchants and Planters, and Persons of every class and denomination in their support of this Society. It is, however, much to be desired that the number of such Benefactors to Newfoundland were greatly enlarged, as well in the Capital as throughout the Colony; there are at this moment applications from several Out-Harbours to your Committee for Schools, which it is not in their power to comply with; indeed, the necessities of the Island are so great that they demand all the energies which the charity, and the liberality of the Christian or the Philanthropist can exercise.

The number of Scholars which have been admitted into the Schools, and those now in attendance, according to the latest returns, is as follows :—

	Daily now on Books.	Sunday, pre- sent attend- ance.	Adult, total admitted.	Total admit- ted into Daily Schools.
St. John's	129	17	156	423
Quidi Vidi	20	20	—	55
Trinity	86	86	75	110
Harbour Grace	95	113	25	198
Petty Harbour	61	76	43	99
Carbonnierre..	56	59	20	116
Bonavista	99	—	21	173
	546	371	340	1,174

making a total of 1,514 individuals, Children and Adults, exclusive of such Sunday Scholars as do not attend the Daily Schools.

The want of Funds alone, has compelled your Committee during the last year to refrain from sending out more than one additional Master ; they are however greatly encouraged to hope, that when the heavy expence of erecting the necessary buildings in Newfoundland shall cease, their means will soon enable them to do much more.

The Committee do not feel authorized in withholding from the General Meeting the information, that unpleasant, and, as they think, unfounded remarks, have been made on some of the circumstances connected with the Society from a most respectable quarter ; and while it is their desire, as well as their duty, to exercise the utmost forbearance in requiring a satisfactory explanation, they feel that the true interests of a Society depending wholly on its reputation for its resources, demand a vindication of its character, which, from the respectability of the parties, they hope will be given.

While, in conclusion, your Committee express their confidence in the growing prosperity and ultimate success of this Society, they would only do so in humble dependence on the divine blessing, never forgetting the words of an Apostle—" So then neither is he that planteth any thing, neither he that watereth, but God that giveth the increase."
